Politics: Non-Partisan • Moderate • 33 years in Ontario • 11 years in Owen Sound

Andrii Zvorygin offers Owen Sound a fully costed new direction: a 2027 budget more than a quarter million below 2026, affordable homes with land, safer neighbourhoods and downtown, and a direct resident voice at City Hall.

About Andrii

Andrii serves his family and community, trusting that all is well and everyone has worth. He runs two profitable businesses: LiberIT helps people with computers, and Lyis Forestry supports local food security. He has been treasurer for local groups, helping manage budgets. He built HelpOS.ca so residents can follow Council work. He has attended Owen Sound and Grey County Council and met federal and provincial officials.

Affordability

Residents face high taxes, rising rents, and fear of eviction. Over twelve years, property taxes rose more than twice as fast as incomes. As Mayor, Andrii can examine fuller City records, find more savings, and lower the budget further while maintaining useful services. He designed a warm, 700-square-foot home with financing around $400 a month. At Grey County, he will propose leasehold communities where families share a rural lot. The shared site could add about $300, bringing the home and land to about $700 a month.

Transparency

Residents feel disconnected. Andrii created HelpOS.ca so residents can follow Council work. Truth is a seed: it needs time to mature. Open Council would include a public mailing list where residents and councillors can ask questions, share ideas, and continue discussion between meetings, so residents can take part while decisions are being made. City Hall would show the full cost of each service, results, and decision progress.

Neighbourhood safety

Residents want themselves and their belongings to feel safe, with clean streets. Each Local Area would have a Local Representative to help neighbours organize watches, safety signs, cameras, cleanups, and safer streets. Annual gatherings would let neighbours meet, choose a representative, and work together on practical local improvements. The representative would also meet with the ward councillor throughout the year to bring concerns forward.

Homelessness

People are losing homes faster than affordable homes are created. Residents have shared stories of loved ones lost on the streets. A vacant-home tax can return empty homes to use and put downward pressure on prices. The draft budget funds trained civilian follow-up and free mobile meals for struggling seniors and people living unsheltered on the outskirts, so police can focus on serious crimes like theft and drug dealing. Stable homes and voluntary rural recovery with meaningful work can help people rebuild.

WE CAN DO THIS

Strong turnout decides who wins. To choose a new direction, residents need to vote in numbers large enough to outweigh support for the same old policies: taxes rising faster than incomes, homes approved only for the wealthy, and residents ignored between elections.

Together, we can listen, cooperate, and act with courage so good ideas become practical work. Tape the sign on the back in your window, and help a friend vote.
